

It's a boy for world's first 'test-tube' baby

Contributed by asap
Monday, 15 January 2007

The world's first "test-tube" baby is now a mother. Louise Brown, 28, gave birth to her first child, Cameron John Mullinder, on Dec. 21 in the western English city of Bristol, reports said.
The world's first "test-tube" baby is now a mother.

Louise Brown, 28, gave birth to her first child, Cameron John Mullinder, on Dec. 21 in the western English city of Bristol, reports said.

She married Wesley Mullinder, 37, three years ago.
BABY WAS NATURALLY CONCEIVED

"He's tiny, just under 6 pounds, but he's perfect," the Mail on Sunday newspaper quoted her as saying.
IN-VITRO SISTERS

Her sister, Natalie, who also was conceived through in-vitro fertilization, in 1999 became the first "test-tube" baby to give birth.